RISK PROFILE AND INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

At the heart of every investment decision is a basic 'trade off' between risk and possible reward. Broadly speaking, the greater the risk attached to an investment, the greater the potential reward but the greater the possibility also of not achieving your objective. Economic cycles and other factors can cause significant changes in the value of securities – both up and down. As a result, investment should only be undertaken on a medium to long-term view. We will act in accordance with your stated willingness to accept risk.
